The Rationale

Education 268 A is the first part of a three-part course in the teaching and learning of history/social science. The summer quarter is a whirlwind introduction to the themes and issues we will explore until the end of our time together nine months from now. Our course draws on the frameworks laid out in the California History-Social Science Standards (available as a pdf document at http://www.cde.ca.gov/re/pn/fd/documents/hist-social-sci-frame.pdf) If you haven’t read the California Standards, you might print them out and have a look—at all 249 pages. (Do so sitting down!) We are also influenced by the new Common Core standards for History/Social Studies (see the pdf document, pp. 60-63, at http://www.corestandards.org/assets/CCSSI_ELA%20Standards.pdf).

Although the social studies curriculum is made up of many different disciplines, at its core of the California History/Social Science Standards is the discipline of history, and that will be the main focus of our time together.

Summer quarter has three interwoven strands. First, we will consider what history is, and how it differs from students’ everyday notions about the past. We will attempt to understand and be more explicit than we might have been previously about how historical knowledge is made, why historians change their minds, and how new historical questions arise. Second, we will examine what it means to learn history—how does students’ thinking develop over time? How can we “see” their historical thinking so that we can shape, guide, and assess it? The third strand brings together the first two as we consider what it means to teach history. By the end of three quarters of C&I you will emerge with concrete strategies that you can directly apply in your own classrooms.

At the heart of historical work is learning how to listen to the voices of our predecessors, those who have given us the world we inhabit. We hear these voices by learning to read and interpret primary sources. Fortunately, we live at a time when sources abound on the Internet. Stanford is the West Coast partner of the Library of Congress’s “Teaching with Primary Sources” program, (http://www.loc.gov/teachers/). Throughout the year, we will devote time and attention to learning how to navigate this incredible digital resource.
Carl Becker claimed in his presidential address to the American Historical Association on December 29, 1931 that “every man is his own historian.” Becker neither meant that we are skilled in reading documentary evidence nor that we all possess the capacity for turning such evidence into compelling narrative. Instead, Becker argued, each of us is called upon to construct stories of our own past and, by extension, the broader past that produced who we are in the present.

The past surrounds us, obviously. But we should not confuse “the past” with history. The past, as heritage, sentiment, nostalgia, or tradition, teaches us to revere and to sanctify. It aims to make us proud of our ancestors and to feel bonded with them in the present. It anchors us in time and gives us a shield against the eroding winds of modernity. The past teaches us to preserve and to respect, to recite and to follow. It cultivates reverence.

As a subject taught in public schools, history has different aims. Taught well, it forces us to raise questions and often unsettles us with the questions it raises. It teaches us how to function in a democracy by sharpening our skills to discern truth from falsehood. It teaches us to read what texts say and what they don’t say, and to appreciate that words often connote as much as they denote. History teaches us, above all, that to understand the past we must listen to multiple voices and come to reasoned conclusions about what to believe. It teaches us that the claims we make should be backed by evidence – primary sources, secondary sources, and sources that reflect different perspectives and different beliefs.

To engage in source work, students will have to engage with multiple texts, but often they come to us expecting to do what has sufficed in the past: reading the textbook and repeating back what it says. Often these same students will be reading considerably below grade level. Whether we like it or not, we must all become reading teachers. For without the ability to read -- and to think critically about that reading -- our students will always be on the outside looking in, watching others make decisions about matters that affect them. In STEP, our job is to help you become teachers of your subject matter, but also teachers who possess a repertoire of skills for developing students’ capacities as literate and effective citizens.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>REQUIRED READINGS</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>• All other readings/materials on coursework: http://coursework.stanford.edu</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

---

1 The American Historical Association has placed this essay on its website, along with several other key essays on historical understanding, http://www.historians.org/info/AHA_history/clbecker.htm

2 We will continue to use several of these books during Fall & Winter quarters as well.

3 Please print out readings on Coursework and bring to class. We have a no laptop policy during class time.
Office Hours

Office hours will be set on the first day of class. You can always see us by making an appointment during another time. If you want to make sure to see us, contact us by e-mail (which is preferable to trying to catch us during the hectic minutes of break).

Assignments

Snapshot Autobiography: The “Snapshot Autobiography” is intended to be a short introduction to the themes of historical writing: issues of selection, significance, storytelling, truth, and felicity. Take an 8 ½ by 11 sheet of paper and fold it, accordion-style, so that it forms three panels—or, counting front and back, six panels. The first panel is the title page for your “Snapshot Autobiography”; the back page is reserved for an “About the Author” section. This leaves four panels. In each of these four panels select the four most important events that have shaped you as a person (everyone should begin, in Panel Two, with “My Birth”). Fill two-thirds of each panel with your narrative and use the bottom third as a place to illustrate your narrative with a small (hand-drawn) picture. Don’t spend a lot of time on the pictures or the narrative. Give your Autobiography a title that captures its essence. Have fun! Due: Tomorrow.

Reading Guides: Five Reading Guides will be posted on Coursework (http://coursework.stanford.edu). Reading Guides are brief writing assignments due at the beginning of class. These reading guides should be typed. All five guides are required in order to earn full credit for this assignment, a 4.0. (Four acceptable guides earn a 3.0; less than four guides receive no credit). Reading guides are a chance for us to see your thinking in a way that is different from class discussion – if you have done the reading, you should be able to complete them in less than an hour. They are not intended to be burdensome and we evaluate them credit/no credit. However, because of the compressed schedule of summer quarter, late reading guides will not be accepted.

Seeing Student Thinking: This assignment asks you to think critically about how students make sense of historical sources. You will be given sources to use and then you will conduct a “think-aloud” exercise with an adolescent (ideally with a student at the middle school). You will write up your findings in a two-page (single-spaced) analysis. This assignment is due next Thursday, July 12 so start thinking about the participants you will recruit.

“Opening Up History”: For this assignment, the culmination of our time together, you will create a one-day mini-lesson that challenges kids’ notions that history is static, fixed, and already known—a dry compilation of boring names and dates. Because textbooks are a ubiquitous feature in the classroom, you should build your lesson around -- or in response to -- a conventional textbook narrative. In your lesson, you should find some way to problematize the book’s narrative—by challenging it, expanding it, articulating its silences, questioning its assumptions, pointing out its narrowness, and so on. You should bring in ONE other primary or secondary source document to shed light on the textbook. You should use one of the formats

---

4 Hand-drawn, really. This is a clipart-free zone!
5 Using two documents is optional, but you may not use more than two.
listed on the “Textbooks are your Friend” handout (on Coursework). Remember, however, that this is a single 50-minute lesson and therefore has to stand by itself.

Choosing a Topic. So as not to become overwhelmed, choose a topic of moderate grain size—not World War II or the Renaissance, but something more self-contained, e.g., the Allies’ refusal to bomb railroad lines to Auschwitz, the passage of the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution, the antecedents of the Montgomery Bus Boycott, Mussolini’s invasion of Ethiopia, the events leading up to sending US troops to Vietnam, the Sykes-Picot Agreement, and so on. (Important Guideline: If the textbook devotes more than one page to your topic then you’ve bitten off a chunk that is too large.) By next Tuesday, July 10, you should have a topic identified and bring in a copy of the one page textbook excerpt you will use for your mini-lesson; we will schedule individual meetings on that day. (Both the STEP curriculum library and the Cubberley Library have recent and fairly recent textbooks; for that matter, you can even use one of your old textbooks.)

Format: Your final paper should be organized into four parts.

Part 1: State the historical question your lesson will address. In two pages (double-spaced), analyze the textbook selection you choose. How does the textbook present this historical topic? How might the textbook narrative or account be opened up or problematicated? You might consider asking: what is emphasized? What is ignored?
Whose voice is heard? Whose voice is silenced? To engage in this analysis you will have to know more about the topic than what is contained in the brief textbook account, so choose a topic you already know something about.

Part 2: In two to three pages (single spaced), write up a mini-lesson that contains the following sections: goals for student learning; the sequence of activities you will use to achieve these goals; the materials (one other source, not to exceed one page in length) you will use and how you will scaffold them; a rough estimate of how much time each activity will take; how you will “see” student thinking; and how you will close the lesson. Be sure to add what you imagine students will learn before and after this particular lesson. (You can assume that students have read your textbook narrative prior to the lesson.) Note: This section can be written in non-essay bulleted form.

Part 3: Write an accompanying essay of two to three pages (double-spaced) that explains how this lesson challenges students’ belief that history consists of names and dates and is already a finished story. Be sure to connect your ideas to readings from class.

Part 4: In the appendix to your paper, include a legible copy of the textbook selection (no more than one page) you will use. Include any supplementary materials and format documents to be ready for classroom use (e.g., large type font, lots of white space, and no more than 300 words per document). Include full references of all the works you consulted, including the textbook.

Due: Monday, July 16, by 5 PM, in Luke’s box in the basement of Cubberley.

A note about written work: Your written work should reflect care and professionalism.
Twelve-point type (Times or Courier; this is Times New Roman) is required. A few other issues:

1. Please do not print your paper back to back (it makes writing marginal comments extremely difficult);
Please do not try to circumvent page limits by eliminating margins (the default on both sides is at least one inch);

Late work must be cleared with us via email at least two days prior to the due date (this applies to the summer; a different policy will be in force during the fall). Otherwise, the assignment will not be accepted except in dire cases of medical or family emergencies.

---

SCHEDULE OF SUMMER READINGS/CLASSES

Class 1, Monday, July 2 Inquiring into History

Introduction to the Course, Assignments, Goals

Class 2, Tuesday, July 3 What’s History, Anyway?

Read for today:

$ Assignment Due:

Snapshot Autobiography

Reading Guide #1

Happy 4th of July**

Class 3, Thur., July 5 Seeing Student Thinking

Read for today:

$ Assignment Due:

Reading Guide #2
Class 4, Monday, July 9
Frameworks of the Mind

Read for today:

§ Assignment Due:
Reading Guide #3

Class 5, Tuesday, July 10
Using Textbooks Strategically

Read for today:

§ Assignment Due:
Reading Guide #4

One-page sketch of plans for “Opening up History,” including copy of textbook excerpt

Day 6, Wednesday, July 11
Context

Read for today:

§ Assignment Due:
Reading Guide #5

Day 7, Thursday, July 12
Perspective

Read for today:

Everyone reads:

Jigsaw Readings (read the particular selection for the group you were assigned)

- (Japanese Survivor) examples of Japanese perspectives

§ Assignment Due: SEEING STUDENT THINKING assignment, due in class

Day 8, Friday, July 13 Final Class

§ OPENING UP TEXTBOOK Due: Monday, July 16, by 5 PM, in Luke’s box in Cubberley

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Assessment Scheme</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Snapshot Autobiography</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Reading Guides (all five)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seeing Student Thinking</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Opening Up Textbook</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The Web

Learning about resources available on the Web is an absolutely indispensable part of this course. No one today can claim excellence as a history/social science teacher without a deep familiarity with digitized on-line source materials.

As the West Coast partner for the Library of Congress’s Teaching with Primary Source program http://www.loc.gov/teachers/, we will engage in exercises and training related to navigating this site. In addition to the Library of Congress’s extensive resources (which we will explore in class), here are five top “go-to” resources for finding sources and teaching materials on the Web.
The web is ever-changing. If you find a high quality site that we have not listed, please let us know. Other sites you should know about:

Portals

http://teachinghistory.org
[Site for the National History Education Clearinghouse; Stanford was a founding partner]

http://historymatters.gmu.edu
[See especially the list for “Favorite Sites”]

http://www.besthistorysites.net
[A good all-purpose portal with links to world and US sites]

http://www.thebritishmuseum.ac.uk/education/index.html
[The British Museum’s education page has many links to world history sites]

American History

http://www.historicalthinkingmatters.org
[Our attempt to use the Web as a place for teaching Historical Thinking]

http://colfa.utsa.edu/users/jreynolds(Textbooks/TextIntro1.htm [Wade through the first few pages in order to get to excellent OUT material on key events in American history]

http://www.authentichistory.com/[Primary sources and American popular culture; excellent audio of famous speeches]

http://www.pbs.org/wgbh/amex/[PBS’s American Experience is a gold mine]

http://www.smithsonianeducation.org/educators/lesson_plans/history_culture.html
[The Smithsonian’s website has some great lesson plans and other resources]
Specific Topics in US History
http://www.withoutsanctuary.org/[History of lynching in the US; an impressive site]

http://www.densho.org/[Fabulous site for Japanese Internment, with many great teaching resources]

http://www.teachvietnam.org
[Good starting place for Vietnam]

Picturing US History
http://picturinghistory.gc.cuny.edu/
[one of the best sites for lesson plans on ‘reading’ visual evidence]

World History

http://chnm.gmu.edu/whm/whmfinding.php
[Excellent teaching materials from the folks at George Mason]

http://www.nationalgeographic.com/
[The National Geographic Society has fabulous on-line maps and many other excellent resources]

Nazi Propaganda
http://www.calvin.edu/academic/cas/gpa/ww2era.htm
[Excellent site for the context of anti-Semitism]

Holocaust
http://www.ushmm.org/
[The US Holocaust Museum is a fabulous site, particularly its resources for teachers]

A Few Specialized Sites

NBC News Archive
http://www.icue.com/
[Great short video clips from NBC news]

Teaching History through Paintings
http://picturingamerica.neh.gov/
[Great images, lessons and strategies for analyzing art]

Supreme Court Cases
[Great lessons and background materials]
Journals:

[History journals, including The History Teacher, a very good outlet for exchanges between high school and college teachers]

http://worldhistoryconnected.press.illinois.edu/
[Online journal for World History, often many good articles]

---

Professional Organizations to Consider Joining

National Council of History Education http://www.history.org/nche
[By joining NCHE, you automatically receive Historically Speaking, one of the best general history periodicals today]

[By joining as a teacher you automatically get the Magazine of History, a monthly publication with source materials and lesson plans]

[Discounted rates for teacher membership]

[The place where important developments in World History are happening]

[The major organization for social studies teachers; membership provides a subscription to Social Education, a monthly magazine of teaching ideas]

Historical Association (UK) http://www.history.org.uk/
[The Historical Association in Great Britain has many good resources]*